WHEAT, CORN AND OATS.

The Report of the State Department on These Cereals.

The reports of the crop correspondent of the Illinois Department of Agricul ture concerning the growing winter wheat do not materially differ from the bulletin published from this department June 1, at which time it was apparent to the wheat grower that the most favoraole conditions until harvest would make but little improvement in the prospect.
The temperature and preorptation since May I have been a fair average for the season of the year and yet there is no improvement reported in the condition

This report is based on the area re ported standing for harvest May I. On May I the condition of winter wheat in the northern division was reported at 85 percent of an average, and it may be said that the crop has held its own to date in this division.

In the Winter "wheat belt" of the state on May 1, the average condition was reported at 75, and on June 20 the was reported at 13, and on June 20 the same section reports a condition of only 61 per cent. of an average, a decline of 14 points since May 1. In the central division, where the bulk of the winter wheat is raised, the condition is 55 per cent. of as raised, the condition is 60 per cent. of 18 points. In the southern division 67 per cent. of an average condition is reported, a dropping off of 11 points since May 1.

The damage done to the wheat by the Hessian fly cannot be estimated. Noth ing abort of harvest will convey even an approximate idea of the loss from this source. In many locations where there was no sign of this devastating pest until within the past ten days it has made its appearance and is doing much damage. The condition of the sate is about up to the average for lane 20. In the cono the average for June 20. In the co ral division the condition is not good for more than two-thirds of an average crop the reported condition by counties rang-ing from 20 to 100 per cent. of an average for June 20.

The oats crop in the southern division will be nearly if not quite an entire failure. The grain-plant louse made its appearance about June 1, and is daily i county out of the thirty-four composing this division reports a condition of 30 pe cent. of an average, and the condition of this division is not good for 20 per cent. of an average yield per acre. OThe area seeded to corn is somewhat larger than that of last season, when 6,988,000 acres were devoted to the crop.

per cent. of an average for June 20. The crop generally has been well cultivated and looks healthy and vigorous. No complaints of insects in corn reported up to date. The usual statistical work o the department for June 20 will be ready for distribution on June 26, and can had on application to the Secretary.

Tricks of Horse Car Conductors 'Even the best of us," he said, "some fimes miss a fare in a crowd, but it doesn't happen often, and that is because we have thing down to a system. On all lines there are certain streets at which we start to go through our car to pick up nickels. Often I am in doubt as to who has not paid a fare, but I don't take chances of wounding any one's feelings by asking for it in that case. I merely meander through the car, stopping now and then before any one I suspect of not having anted up. The guilty person usually has pricks of conscience when I place myself before him and clears up all doubt by beginning to fish through his pockets for the nickel. That is one of the tricks, and it saves many harsh words, for almost as often as you ask a man who really has settled if his fare has been paid he will abuse you for intimating that he is trying to do the railway company. I have learned by experience that it is better to chip in a nickel out of your own pocket than to go around asking for fares when you are in doubt, and most old time conductors will agree with me."-Boston Herald.

Traveling Children. There is much written newadays concorning the home amusement of children. Would it not be well if suggestions were offered for the entertainment of the little people while traveling? Any one who nas made a long railway journey must have had her sympathies aroused for the tired little mortals, for whom no provision had been made for varying the monotony of the trip. The mothers or aunts accompanying them were provided with books or knitting work, but the poor children had not even strings to play cat's cradle. No wonder that under these circumstances they fidgeted and wearied their companions until traveling with children was voted a bore. If a new picture book, a pencil and paper, a game or a small doll had been provided, to be brought out at the first appearance of rettlessness, the vote might have been different -New York Housekeeper.

Cost of Incandescent Light. Some instructive data concerning the comparative cost of incandescent lighting have been published. The average ost of maintaining a sixteen candle power lamp for twenty-four hours was shown to be 6 32 cents. A careful study of these data should be made by the wner of every office building. The total early average cost per lamp in a modern office building should not exceed $4, including every possible expense, aside from electric or combination fixtures. New York Telegram.

The great public desire a medicine that is an absolute specific for a cough or cold, that allays inflammation, restores the tone to the system and acts as a tonic and stimulant, while it is harmless and can be given to children with impunity. These qualities are all contained in Reid's Germain Cough and Kidney Cure. It is composed of simple ingredients, which combined in one preparation form the most efficacious rem-

the charges presented in the con plants have dropped out of sight. They were of little implication the anglury for that reason, in live art. If to consider the one grave acts are successful to which alone the woods, and we are the accusation to which alone the woods and a grave the acts are the considerated.

State law which compels reservation of corporato rights proved unfaithful to its charter and duties. It is a violation of law for corporations to enter into a partnership as shown in the case of Whitten vs. Upton, 10 Gray, 596, which furnishes thereasons at length. If the trust had been properly followed as a corporation under the laws, the twenty separate companies would have been dissolved, and not remain in existence as in this case. The present corporation or trust puts upon the market capital stock proudly defaunt of assual values and capable of unlimited expansion. It is one thing for the State to respect the rights of ownership, and quite another thing to add to that possibility a further extension of those consequences by creating artificial persons to aid in such aggregations. It corporate one can combine and mass their forces in a solid trust with little added risk to capital sire add in whoost limit to magnitude, a tempting and easy road is opened to, normous combinations, vastly exceeding in number and strength any possibilisies of individual concrabity. The law seeks to protect individuals rather than combinations.

Concluding, the Opinion says Concluding, the Opinion says

The detendant corporation has violated its charter and failed in the performance of its corporate duties, and that in respects so material and important as to justify a judgment of dissolution. Having reached that result it is needless to advance into the wider discussion over monopolies and the problem of political soonomy. Our duty is to leave them until some proper urgoney compels their consideration without either approval or disapproval of the views expressed by the court below. We are enabled to decide that in this State there can be no purtnerships of separateer independabled to decide that in this State there can be no partnerships of separate or independent conporations whether directly er indirectly through the medium of a trust, no substantial consolidation, which avoids and disregards the statutory provisions and restraints, but that manufacturing corporations must be and romain ever as they were created or one under the statute. The judgment appeared from, is affirmed with costs. All of the members of the court

During the evening two neat crescents, tied together with the club colors, were passed around to the young gentlemen and on one crescent was inscribed the name of a tune given to a young lady. It was then his task to search out the lady with the tune corresponding with the one on the crescent and then address her in the tune which was given him in his invitation. The effect was amusing as no two persons had like songs. After a brief session of this melodious proceeding the guests stepped into the parlors and were seated at the supper tables. FOURTH OF USES TABLES TO THE PROPERTY OF THE P

Linn & Schuces are Sole Agents for the celebrated "Centemeri" Kid Gloves. See advertisement.

A good dog story is al ways appreciated, because canine sagneity seems inexhaustible in its resources. A Glasgow gentle-man owned a very intelligent Newfoundland dog, who accompanied his master wherever he went, and was his inseparable companion in his visits and to church. One evening the gentleman went to visit a neighbor. The dog attended him. It was quite late when the gentleman started for home and, to his surprise, the dog could not be found.

After the family had retired there was a great noise in the kitchen. It was supposed that burglars were robbing the house. Soon there was a crash and a smash like the breaking of a window, and then all was still. The morning revealed the mystery. The dog had fallen asleep under the table. He had [realized that his master had gone home, and the noise heard was the attempt of the dog to make his means. As there was no other glass and frame with him.

It was a long time before his master visited that house again. When he did, his dog accompanied him, and the animal found his way through the open door of the kitchen to his old hiding place under the table. When the mas ter was about to start for home neither his hat nor cane could be found. After a long search the dog was discovered fast stick. How the dog obtained possession of those articles no one could tell. He remembered his last visit to the place, and how scurvily he had been treated The sagacious creature resolved not to be left behind next time. He knew that his master could not go home without the hat and stick, and that he would be awakened when the owner got ready to start. His plans were acutely laid, and if he had been human he could not have done better. -- Boston Budget.

Speaking of symmetry in the building of cities, the people of Berlin, Germany, are quite legical and successful in their methods. In that city uniformity in building is preserved by a municipal law that dictates the height of edifices according to the width of the street. For instance, on a street sixty feet wide the law provides, I think, that houses over four stories in height shall not be erected thereon. On streets eighty feet wide the height is six stories, and on other streets in proportion, thus giving tall houses to wide streets and less altitudinous buildings to narrow streets. I may not have mentioned the exact dimensions of streets and houses, but that is the general plan of the system. By this means great and, I think, attractive uniformity a secured.

Again in Berlin the people cannot build residences or business houses anywhere they please. The city has been built up solfdly and compactly simply because the law compelled buildings to be erected adjoining each other either on the south, north, east or west extensions. A can-not build a tall minaret on some isolated lot away from B, but he must, in order to build at all, secure the land adjoining the last house built, in either direction and when C comes to build he must folow sult. These two provisions of the Berlin municipality law tend to make it the most uniform city in the world.—H. S. Fairchild in St. Paul Pioneer Press.

There is a kind of tin mag called the gamelle, in which the French soldier receives his rations, and which he carrie on his knapsack. The form is a little peculiar, so as to distinguish it from other ordinary tin mugs. A simple implement which, carried on the backs of French soldiers, has murched so often to victory, and of late to defeat, has at last received its reward in its glorification. When the young Duke of Orleans came before the court, and exclaimed: "I ask for nothing but a gamelle," meaning nothing but the treatment of a common soldier, the public readily seized upon Searcely three days had elapsed before a great jeweler of the Rue de la Paix had hundreds of "tin mugs" in silver, gold and jewels as pins and badges, which old immediately as the "tin mug of Orleans," and were worn all over Paris. A popular florist designed a vase in the shape of the "tin mng," and presented snaps or the 'on ling, and presented the first specimen to the prince, who sent it to his bride, Margaret de Chartres, filled with roses and lilies of the valley. In the meanwhile all Paris is sporting the soldier's tin mug in the tri-color, and the young duke has left a fashionable ornament to remember him by.-New York Ledger.
